

Palm Sunday Monologue

Across the Mount of Olives
he came mounted on a donkey,
and the power of his presence was strong enough to touch.

We left what we were doing,
and paid homage on the roadside.
We flung our coats before him
and made banners out of branches.

We talked of history in the making
how we wanted to be in it.
'It's the turning of the tide,
David's son to David's city.
He is here to rule his own.
We walked with purpose and
with passion,
Joy thrilled deep within our souls.

Oh we meant him well
Our prince of hearts.
We'd live to do his bidding,
we'd always be there for him
and we'd follow to the end.

But there was malice in the air
had we stopped enough to notice.
There was hatred in the eye of Pharisee & scribe...
and the Roman soldiers watchful....

But our ears were for the party
and the shouts of jubilation,
and our spirits high with hope
as we gloried at his ride.

There was outrage in the temple
but what could they do to harm him?
There were thousands of us thronging by his side.

And the Roman soldiers watchful....
