

Richard's Corner

Jesus choose salt and light to illustrate what we are to be in the world. One of the fascinating things about these metaphors is that they both imply that there must be contact with the world. Both salt and light work, as it were, by being there. Salt works by being mixed with the thing that it is to effect—by being there. Light also works by being placed in the place which needs illumination—by being there. A candle in the daylight is of little use. A candle in a place of deep darkness is a miracle and a saviour. And this leads naturally to another amazing thing about these metaphors—quantity doesn't really come into it. I think we so often disqualify ourselves because we estimate the influence we can have and it doesn't seem much at all. Imagine if the little boy who supplied the 5 loaves and 2 small fish had said "No you can't have them because they are so small they won't make any difference!" 5000 people and more would've gone hungry that day. Salt must be put with that which it is to influence. It cannot sit back and be apart from it and be at all effective. Light, likewise, works in dark places. As things around us become darker, what we will always shine more brightly. The Church has always been more effective in times when things around it were difficult and we also will find that our faith becomes more real as it is tested by real trials. The question is, are we prepared to make contact—to be available in a way that allows what God has put within us to shine? If you don't know, simply ask God to show you the way. What God has put within us is stronger than what is against us!
